Co-sponsored by the Town of Brookhaven, Renewable Energy Long Island and LIPA

Farmingville, NY - Supervisor Ed Romaine and the Town of Brookhaven will host the Holiday Clean Energy Forum on December 9th from 9:30 am to 1:30 pm. The event, which is co-sponsored by the Town, Renewable Energy Long Island and LIPA, will be held in the the lobby of Brookhaven Town Hall located at One Independence Hill in Farmingville.

The Holiday Clean Energy Forum will give residents the opportunity to hear from industry experts on the benefits of renewable energy and energy efficient home applications, including solar hot water and electric systems, energy efficiency home upgrades and energy efficient lighting and appliances.

"There are many good reasons for everyone to make clean, renewable energy a part of our daily lives," said Supervisor Romaine. "We can all benefit by saving money and contributing to a healthier environment for our children. I encourage residents to stop by the Holiday Clean Energy Forum to learn how they can help make Brookhaven a cleaner, greener place to live."

The Holiday Clean Energy Forum is free for all residents. To learn more or to RSVP, please visit RenewableEnergyLongIsland.org or contact info@renewableenergylongisland.org or call 631-329-8888
